RABBI SPITZ'S MESSAGE

“We Are All Here for a Visit”

Summer is a time for travel. While I welcome relaxation offered by a change of scenery, less responsibility, and rest, when given a canvas of time I am driven by curiosity. I am eager to see how other people live in order to understand their lives. This requires background reading of history, demography, and politics and seeking out good tour guides. And when meeting locals, I ask questions to glean what gives their lives shape, meaning, and joy. I do so in part to understand my own assumptions and to thereby gain wisdom. When exploring, I do so for its own sake: a love of learning. In such travels, I know that my exploration is always incomplete: more layers to people's lives and culture, more details to absorb, more places to visit, more beauty to savor, more experiences to take in. And yet, to travel with a desire to understand for its own sake and to enjoy natural beauty is to appreciate the distinctiveness of each place and the goodness of the world.

When we seek to get away, our own inner makeup abides and impacts. Wherever we go, we are there. Curiosity also guides the desire to know my inner life. I do so with the tools of meditation, conversation, reflection, Shabbat repose, and prayer. Inside is a landscape of memories, propensities, and influences that warrant observation and articulation. Polonius in Shakespeare's Hamlet declares, “To thine own self be true.” His guidance assumes a knowledge of our interior, offering a moral compass and personal goals. Rabbi Menachem Mendel of Kotzk (Poland, 1787-1859) put this need for self-direction in a pithy way: “If I am I because I am I, and you are you because you are you, then I am I and you are you. But if I am I because you are you and you are you because I am I, then I am not I and you are not you!” Or in the words of 19th century Oscar Wilde, “Be yourself, everyone else is already taken.”

Inner exploration is first and foremost driven by a desire to understand for its own sake. Some thinkers have expressed skepticism that self-evaluation will lead to wisdom. Goethe wrote, “Know myself? If I knew myself I would run away.” There are parts of ourselves that are not easy to know, or, once known, are very hard to admire or to like. And yet, our tradition encourages self-reflection, heshbon hanefesh, accounting of our soul. To do so is to identify assets and liabilities and to know that at our core we are “created in the image of God.” To penetrate beneath the outer layers of personality is to reveal our essential goodness.

Curiosity is the engine of learning and growing. Travel in the world at large and inner exploration provide lessons for our journey through life: whom we travel with is of paramount importance for memory-making and contentment; setting a destination enables leaving our comfort zone; spontaneity requires much preparation; what we most remember are the people we meet along the way; there is always incompleteness. And yet, in taking in the world around us or going deep within our selves, we encounter beauty and even holiness that uplifts us. Our travels are finite. Savoring goodness and adventure propel us forward despite immediate challenges and makes our journeys joyful and whole. ☆

Was Shakespeare a Jewish Woman?

Hear thoughts and speculation
from Julia Lupton, UCI professor and Shakespeare researcher

Julia Lupton, PhD is Professor of English and co-director of the UC Irvine Shakespeare Center. She is the author or co-author of four books on Shakespeare and many articles. A former Guggenheim Fellow, she is a Trustee of the Shakespeare Association of America.

A recent article in The Atlantic theorizes that some of Shakespeare's works may have actually been written by a woman, perhaps Emilia Bassano of a Converso family. Join us to hear thoughts on this speculation from CBI member Julia Lupton, UCI professor and Shakespeare researcher.

MOHAMMED AL SAMAWI
Selichot Speaker

Saturday, September 21
at 8:30 PM

Mohammed Al
Samawi is the author of
*The Fox Hunt,
A Refugee's Memoir
of Coming to America*

A young Muslim growing up in Yemen, Mohammed connected with Christians and Jews on social media and then at interfaith conferences outside of Yemen. His activism and promotion of interfaith dialogue brought death threats, and as the Yemeni Civil War intensified Al Samawi reached out to facebook contacts he had met. What followed was a remarkable effort on the part of four ordinary young people to secure the release of a man they barely knew.

CBI SHABBAT SHA-HOME

• invite

CBI members to a Shabbat meal

• grow

connections among congregants

• celebrate

Shabbat meals being eaten with family & friends

By opening our homes to fellow congregants, CBI becomes a stronger and more vibrant Jewish community. Shabbat meals eaten throughout the year will promote tradition and connection to our families and friends.

Everyone is invited to participate.

Congregants can choose a host and a weekend that works for them.

The 2019 dates are: July 12-13 and August 23-24.

Please register online at www.cbi18.org/shahome

An information packet is available online and includes blessings and other support materials. Participants are encouraged to share details of their Shabbat evenings.
